SPRING 2009

AML is pleased to announce the production of the famous B&O "DOCKSIDE" of the Baltimore Waterfront. Four switchers were built in 1912 by Baldwin for the B&O. Initially constructed as saddle tank engines, some were given tenders in later years. The diminutive size and short wheelbase were required to handle the tight curves of these lines.

The live steam AML models are butane gas fired and are constructed with steel frame, steel drivers, brass cab, and copper boiler. Each boiler is fitted with a water level glass and pressure gauge. The cab roof lifts up and tilts side-ways to give easy access to the cab interior.

NEW

The USRA 0-6-0's were used all over the country on as many as 25 or more different roads. Their short wheel base allowed them to go to around very tight curves on city street trackage and in industrial areas. These 0-6-0's were a standard design developed during World War I and were in use all the way to the end of steam in the mid 1950's. Baldwin and Alco both built the 250 plus locomotives of this class, This run of USRA 0-6-0's represents a good cross section of the railroads that used the coal, and oil fired versions that were in use between 1918 and the mid 50's.
